SATURDAY MORNING, APRIL 21, 1860.

A VISIT TO VESUVIUS. The intelligent correspondent of the Providence Journal, furnishes, under date of Naples, March 17, the following account of a recent visit to Vesuvius: "Did you ever ascend Vesuvius? Do you remember how you set off from Naples one fine morning, with the promise of a day of adventure and of pleasurable excitement?-You had been to Pompeii the day before, and | CONCENTRATED and SOLUBLE FORM the two indishad returned satisfied, although somewhat fatigued by the long walks through the streets of the buried city-relieved now and then by a ride in those funny chairs-and PHATE," are given to the soil in all their original soiled by the dust kicked up on the road .--You know that, with pleasant weather, Baiæ, the soil, furnish all the needful Ammonia for the neighborhood. Being sold under the first deed of Capri, Capodimonte, and Sorrento might be growing crop, giving it ample luxuriance, and leave trust, the title will be good. made charming excursions of a day, but the ascent of Vesuvius was a task to be performed. Sufficiently fatigueing in years past, now that the surface of the mountain has beor who would dare, to go away from Naples without making the attempt to accomplish it?

"The five miles of rude roadway and pathway up the mountain, every tolerably pleasant day at this season, are filled with people going up and coming down mounted on the backs of borses, asses, and mules. The chances are that one may meet an American acquaintance on the side of the mountain, not seen before for a number of years. Such was my own experience.

"Directing the horse's head with care; mounting, plunging, scrambling over masses of lava, which make inconceivably rough, narrow, and crooked the path; flushed with excitement, trembling with solicitude, perspiring with exertion, laughing to stimulate others, and shouting to and thumping the beast on which you ride, you at length reach the foot of the cone. Through what valleys ofdesolation, over what horrid black hillocks your path has led! You are forced to exclaim, "Does nature any where present a scene more gloomy and hopeless, or a more inhabitants of this mountain look more like members of some diabolical crew than creatures belonging to our race. These imps, or land pirates, are worse, if possible, than those encountered along the shore towards Baiæ. To be cheated, annoyed, and insulted, is what one may expect on both sides of the beautiful bay.

But go up the cone, if you can, without assistance. Courage, time, and patience are needed, but if you are able to do it, there is a sufficient compensation found in the pleasing consciousness of having performed an heroic exploit. It has been my fortune twice to come down the mountain in the night-to lunch on the side of the cone, with intervals of star-light, or under a canopy of fog, or eat a meagre omelet and drink a bottle of inferior Lacrima Cristi, with the monk at the hermitage, by the light of a wretched candle. The fires of the mountain glow with a redder glare to light your lonely pilgrimage, as again and again you look back and wonder at the spectacle, and wish that some friend far way might see it with you."

A PRETTY PICTURE OF A WOMAN.—There is something extremely pleasant and even touching-at least of very sweet, soft, and varied assortment of winning effect-in this peculiarity of needle- FARMING IMPLEMENTS, work, distinguishing women from men .-So says Mr. Hawthorne; and he further observes that our sex is incapable of any such by-play, aside from the main business of life; but women-be they of what earthly rank PLOWS AND CASTINGS, they may, however gifted with intellect or genius, or endowed with awful beautyhave always some little handiwork ready to fill the tiny gap of every vacant moment. A needle is familiar to the fingers of them all. A queen, no doubt, plies it on occasion; the woman poet can use it as adroitly as her pen; the woman's eye that has discovered a new star turns from its glory to send the polished little instrument gleaming along the hem of her kerchief, or to darn a casual fray in her dress. And they have greatly the advantage of us in this repect. The slender thread of silk or cotton keeps them united with the small, familiar, gentle interests of life, the continually operating influences of which do so much for the health of the character, and carry off what would otherwise be a dangerous accumulation of morbid sensibility. A vast deal of human sympathy runs along this electric line, stretching from the thread to the wicker-chair of the humblest seamstress, and keeping high and low in a species of communion with their kindred beings. Methinks it is a token of healthy and gentle characteristics when women of high thoughts and accomplishments love to sew, especially as they are never more at home with their hearts than while so occupied.

A PERFECT FIRE BRIGADE, -A Berlin correspondent writes as follows:

A fire here is very soon extinguished .-The arrangements are so perfect that a man may quietly lie in his bed in the adjoining house, and only rise if he finds the walls growing uncommonly hot around him.— Then he may quietly dress and leave, for there will be no rush and no noise and no
